Pleasant Things to be Seen In the Winter Colony at Saranae.

The natives of the Adirondacks are, as a class, a kindly and trustworthy ings with the throngs who annually invade their territory, and in their elfortune it is to live on the tourist, the sportsman or the invalid. The Adirondack guide is so often a man of parts and resource—skilled in woodcraft, apt and resource—skilled in woodcraft, apt the second story back whidow, and the PHYSICIANS AND SURGEONS, in emergencies, full of good scose and good humor, and a companion of one's vacation mood who adds not a little to its zest and pleasure. One readily fulls into the ways of the winter colony at Saranne, and finds them ways of ploasuntness; not at all akin to the rigor of the elimate, but rather suggestive of tropical dell-beration and icisarchiness. The healthseekers usually number from fifty to seventy persons, and although some form of pulmonary trouble has trans-planted them to this wlatery cilme there is no suggestion of invalidism in the atmosphere of the place. A more aggrossively-active set of persons is probably not to be found the world ovor. Now that the physicians have practically agreed that air and nutriton are the principal, if not the only, means of overcoming pulmonary weakness or discusse, ont-of-door life is the invariable prescription for all troubles of this kind. Four or five air and stimulating a vigorous appetite.

-Chleago Tribune. OUT-DOOR EXERCISE.

Among the righ, horseback rights has taken a great leap ahead. English running races and steeple-chases have boon latroduced, and the American "fox-hunt," If in one of its essentia opidemic of health. The professional players, who are most bonefited physically by it, are, to be sure, fow in number in comparison with our sixty millions of population—though they constitute a small army in themselves. Still they furnish the occasion of the inhabitants of our the occasion of the intuitinate of our inreger cities turning out en masse as spectators and sponding hours in the open air; besides which, every sort and description of natateur citie is induced to fake the field, and eyen the boot-blacks and nowsboys carry a ball in their pockets, and till the intervals between business with its use. Not less universal and beneficial is lawntennis (in spite of possible "tomistennls (in spite of possible "tonnis cibows") -- un ndinirable game, pos-sessing, with horsemaship, the advantage of being equally well adapted to either sex. Lacrosse is transmitted to as from the indians, and should be more generally played than it is. Another Canadlan sport, tobogganing, is rapidly growing in popularity; and so, wo trust, is snow-shocing. Our col leges are the seat of boatlug, foot-ball, base-ball and general athletic contests to an extent that has given rise to a sports-rimiling, leaping, wrestling easting the stone, etc .- the girls and standing joke on the subject. Pienles and out-door association meetings are seldem complete without their athletic women, too, sometimes taking part. women, too, sometimes taking part. The English "paper hant" has been naturalized in some localities. Bicycling and tricycling are fast becoming as common here as anywhere. Vachting, canocing, swimming, and the various modes of navigation, prevail in summer, while in winter skating takes their pince. Pedestrian tours are growing popular, many many and growing popular unnought mon, and even our women are learning to realize the pleasure and profit in them. We have borrowed the gymnasium from the Gormans: why not adopt their out-door gynnasium, too?

The whole is a movement in the right illrection. The more widely the sports In the above enumeration, and others like them, flourish amongst as, the better will it be for our country at her most vital point.—Boston Journal of

VOICELESS IMAGES.

Without Them Nothing Can Ite Rone in Fields of Thought. Images are repetitions of sensation endowed with all its mental wealth, and consciously reproduced from the atores of memory. Both in their own nature and in this very work of repro-duction all true imagery is bithed in the light of a thousand concepts. Hence it is that without images we can do nothing in the fields of thought, whilst with images we can mentally do nil things which it is given us to do. It was the Baren who found her, hut ahe was quite dead when he gave the alarm, and though he appeared to be frantic with grief, he could make no euggestions in rogard to the possible murderer. All the evidence obtained by the police pointed to his owa guilt, and ho was accordingly arrested. Then there were found among his papers lettere addressed to Baron Scharrenschild, and he confessed under pressure that this was his true name, and that he had assumed that of Manchausen. Al-though it was known that he had an interest in his wife's death, being greatly ln need of her money, he would not acknowledge that as the reason, but declared that he had done the deed in attempting to shoot n' pet dog which had appoyed him.
